Estimated Direct Expenses Each Student

- Trans-atlantic Airfare $1500
- International Travel in Europe (4 trips by air or train) $. 500

- Self-Directed Study (Housing/Metro/Bike, Admissions, etc)                     $. 400
- Meals and Personal Expenses   $2000

In addition, each student are required to pay their individual Georgia Tech degree program’s tuition for full time (12 credit hours) study during the summer semester. Note that non-resident students only pay Georgia resident tuition for the MAMC Program. Instead, participating students pay only resident tuition and a $250 fee. All students also pay the required Georgia Tech Technology Fee for the summer semester.

Note: The Program Fee and Tuition include the following: (1) shared housing (in 2, 3 or 4 person rooms) for duration of the program, except for four nights during the Self Directed Study period; (2) transit/bike/taxi/auto-van rentals and train travel for group site visits, (3) group visit entry fees, (4) honoraria for visiting lecturers and guides, and (5) other expenses to support the academic objectives of the MAMC Program. In addition, Tuition supports faculty travel, per diem expenses, and stipends.

Note: Each student is responsible for his or her transatlantic travel and international travel in Europe (Berlin to Amsterdam, Amsterdam to the Self-Directed Study location, the Self-Directed Study location to London and from London to Paris). Each student is also responsible for the costs of airport transfers to and from the primary housing location in each city. For Self-Directed Studies (Barcelona, Copenhagen or Vienna or another location), each student must pay for their housing, local transportation, admissions, etc. during those travel and study days. Students are also responsible for their meals, books and supplies, individual travel and incidentals for the entire duration of the program. Participants who request single occupancy accommodations or special requests must pay the difference in cost.

All participants must confirm that they are physically fit to enable substantial walking excursions and also have experience riding a bicycle, unless special circumstances are noted at time of application.
