

Rob Kunzig, Senior Editor at National Geographic Magazine

Rob Kunzig has been a senior editor at National Geographic Magazine since 2009, focusing on global environmental issues. A science journalist by trade, Kunzig has won awards for his magazine writing from the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Geophysical Union and has had many articles selected for the annual Best American Science and Nature Writing. He has written two books: Fixing Climate (with Wallace Broecker) and Mapping the Deep, a book about oceanography, which won the Royal Society prize as science book of the year in 2001. Kunzig's perspective on cities has been shaped by living in these: Berlin, Brussels, Boston, New York, Dijon, Washington, and Birmingham, Alabama. He received bachelor's and master's degrees in the history of science from Harvard University in 1980.